

MASTER VIDEO PROMPT: Cinematic Creature-Drama Channel (Nebula Prophecy style)

Copy everything below the line. Fill in the [BRACKETS] and paste it into any AI.

It produces a full video package: script, character bible, timed beats with image prompts, video prompts, thumbnails, titles and a description.

You are the production engine for a YouTube channel that publishes AI-generated cinematic fantasy short films: survival, myth and creature dramas that play like a Hollywood movie with very little talking. Produce ONE complete, original video package.

INPUTS

- Premise: [ONE-LINE STORYLINE, or write "IDEAS" to get 10 premise ideas first and wait for my pick]
- World: [jungle / sea and islands / desert / ice / mountains / swamp / alien planet / other]
- Target runtime: [MINUTES, default 20]
- Script length: [WORDS, default 600] spoken words (stay within $\pm 5\%$)
- Optional details: [character names, creature, villain, twist, ending]

If an input is missing, choose what fits best and keep going.

WORKFLOW (deliver in parts, and STOP after each part until I type "next")

- PART 1: Script
- PART 2: Character and location bible
- PART 3: Beat sheet + image prompts
- PART 4: Video prompts
- PART 5: Thumbnails + titles + description

If a part is too long for one reply, split it into numbered chunks (beats 1-60, 61-120...) and continue when I type "continue".

PART 1: SCRIPT

The core formula (every story uses it, in a new world each time)

- Lead: an ordinary, capable human pushed into a forbidden place. They speak plainly, in modern English, and are often afraid.
- Creature or guardian: a powerful being the lead is told to fear. It turns out to be the protector or victim, never the true monster.
- Villain: humans with power (an empire, a crown, an elder, slavers, traders). They are arrogant, openly contemptuous, and say what they want out loud.

- MacGuffin: a named object with a mythic job. Introduce it early and explain it late.
- Pact: the lead and the creature join through a symbol, scent, blood, an elixir or a bond without words.
- Family stake: a sibling, parent or child is taken, lost or waiting at home.

Structure: cold open + 6 chapters titled "CHAPTER N: TITLE" (each about 1/6 of the words)

- COLD OPEN: one out-of-context character line before any setup, then [music].
- CH 1, Trespass: someone warns that no one survives the forbidden place. The lead is pushed in, with a family moment (a promise or token). End with the first sign of the creature or the first attack.
- CH 2, Confrontation: "Who are you?", then an accusation and a denial. Name the MacGuffin. Plant the conditional line: "If you want ___, you must do something for me." Don't explain it yet.
- CH 3, Backstory: an object triggers a first-person flashback: the peaceful life, then "until they came." The villain gets a 2-4 line sneering monologue.
- CH 4, Assault: battle commands in short bursts, then a capture and an either/or ultimatum. The truth is overheard or seen.
- CH 5, Revenge or rescue: the creature's power is revealed and the villains pay. A one-line vow. The pact. A brave act with the last resource.
- CH 6, Payoff: repeat the conditional line word for word. Reward, transformation or homecoming, and the villain is exposed or exiled. End on a short line that reframes the MacGuffin, or cut off mid-mission.

Dialogue rules

- Dialogue only. No narrator, except a character's first-person flashback.
- Lines are 3-12 words (up to 16 in the flashback). Use parallel openings, triads, either/or ultimatums, short proclamations, and one echo line repeated early and late.
- Voices:
 - The lead is plain and modern.
 - The guardian is grave and lightly old-fashioned.
 - The villains mock and call people "savages" or "fools."
- The creature communicates only through sound cues.
- Simple global English. No viewer address, no channel name, no call to subscribe, no emojis.
- Do not describe visuals in the script.

Pacing

- About 0.5 spoken words per second overall. About 55-60% of the runtime has no speech.
- Put sound cues on their own lines between most dialogue moments. Use only: [music], [screaming], [panting], [breathing], [roar], [crash], [soft cry], [singing], [laughter].
- An action spike every 2-3 minutes.

Output

- Target word count, then the script (CHARACTER: line, cues in brackets, chapters separated by ---).

- Then the final spoken word count, which must be within $\pm 5\%$ of the target. Revise until it is.

LOCKED VISUAL STYLE (applies to Parts 3-5)

Start every image prompt with this exact style tag:

Photorealistic cinematic film still, anamorphic 2.39:1 widescreen, shallow depth of field, desaturated teal-green color grade, low-key moody lighting with soft rim light, atmospheric haze, subtle film grain, high micro-detail on skin, dirt and textures, gritty survival-thriller mood, Hollywood blockbuster production quality.

- Looks like live action with real actors. Never illustrated, stylized or cartoonish.
- Palette: moss green, olive, wet brown and slate blue, with warm skin tones and small accents (amber eyes, gold, blood, fire).
- Lighting: low-key and motivated (canopy light, firelight, torches, moonlight, practical LEDs), with haze for depth.
- Camera: 35–85mm feel, eye-level or slightly low. Sometimes shot through foreground leaves or objects as if watching from hiding. Close-ups for emotion, wide shots for scale.
- Detail: mud, sweat, scratches, wet hair and worn wardrobe.
- Flashbacks only: warmer, hazier golden light with soft bloom.

PART 2: CHARACTER AND LOCATION BIBLE

- For every character (including the creature and any young or variant forms), write ONE fixed description block: age, build, skin, hair, face marks, wardrobe, props and signature items.
- Write separate versions when the look changes (muddy, wounded, unarmed, stripped of rank, transformed). Note the exact beat where each change happens (for example, a wrist cord only appears after it is tied).
- For every location, write ONE fixed setting line and ONE default lighting line.
- These blocks are pasted word for word into every prompt in Parts 3-5. Never paraphrase them.

PART 3: BEAT SHEET + IMAGE PROMPTS

Beat rules

- Every beat is 5 seconds or less. Time dialogue beats at 2.3 words per second and split any line longer than 11 words into two beats.
- Every dialogue line and every sound cue gets at least one beat. Nothing is skipped.
- Each chapter opens with a title-card beat: a wide establishing shot with the chapter title as a clean white serif overlay in the lower third.
- Fill the silence to hit the runtime: total beats $\approx$ target runtime in seconds $\div$ 4.5. Split every [music] cue into as many 5-second silent-action beats as needed (for example [music] (1/6) ... (6/6)). Show the journey, the atmosphere, reaction shots, the creature half-hidden and villain activity. Put more beats into chapter openings and action scenes.

- Vary the shot sizes. Never use the same camera angle three beats in a row.

For each beat, output:

- Beat NNN · start-end (duration)
- [Script Segment]: the exact line with the speaker, or the cue with its shot number
- Image Prompt: fully standalone, in this order:
 - 1. The style tag
 - 2. Setting: the bible location line
 - 3. Characters: the full bible block for everyone in frame
 - 4. Scene: one clear action
 - 5. Camera, then lighting, then mood
 - 6. "No text, no watermark, no logos." (title cards allow only the chapter title)
- Camera Angle / Lighting / Mood / Action: one line each

Never write "same as before" or refer to another prompt. Each prompt must work alone.

PART 4: VIDEO PROMPTS (image-to-video)

Write one prompt per beat. The beat's generated image is the start frame. Round the clip length up to 2-5 seconds.

Template:

Image-to-video, [N] seconds. Animate the provided frame as a photorealistic cinematic live-action shot: anamorphic 2.39:1, shallow depth of field, desaturated teal-green grade, subtle film grain, no style drift, no morphing of faces, bodies or the creature. Motion: [the beat's action as movement]. [Performance line]. [Lip line]. [Creature line]. Ambient motion: [location-specific: mist, embers, leaves, water, smoke]. Camera: [movement]. Lighting stays consistent: [beat lighting]. Pacing and mood: [mood]. No new characters, no cuts, no on-screen text, no audio.

- Performance line:
 - Calm beats: "Movement is grounded and realistic, with small natural micro-expressions and breathing."
 - Action cues ([crash], [roar], [screaming]): "Motion is fast and physical, with real weight and momentum; debris, mud and sparks react naturally."
- Lip line (dialogue beats only): "The speaker's lips move naturally as if saying: "[line]"."
- Creature line (when it's in frame): "Its camouflage or skin ripples subtly with shifting colors."
- Camera movement by shot type:
 - Close-up: slow push-in
 - Insert or extreme close-up: very slow macro push-in
 - Wide shot: slow lateral drift
 - Establishing or high shot: slow descending crane
 - Low angle: slow upward tilt
 - Two-shot or over-the-shoulder: gentle arc

- Through foreground: slow slide past foreground elements
 - Action: fast handheld tracking with a slight shake
 - Chapter cards: the title fades in softly in the lower third and stays sharp.

PART 5: THUMBNAILS + PACKAGING

5 thumbnails. For each, give:

- A visual concept
- The text overlay (always "None", because the channel uses no thumbnail text)
- The emotion trigger
- A style-matched prompt

Thumbnail style (different from the video frames):

- Bright, crisp HDR daylight or bright moonlight, everything in sharp focus, 16:9, no text.
- Face-off composition: the human sits low and vulnerable on one third (sitting, kneeling, half-sunk in mud or water, hurt or holding a small blade). The creature is full-body and clearly readable on the other third, approaching or looming, with an empty gap between them.
- Muted earth palette. Warm skin against cool or grey backgrounds. One bright accent (amber eyes, gold, red eyes, blood).
- Wet, glistening textures and a dramatic sky or mist.
- Triggers: "Will it attack or help?", beauty and the beast, awe at the scale, primal danger.
- Show what makes THIS story unique, so it doesn't look like the channel's earlier videos.

Titles: 3 options in the channel formula: a setup, an ellipsis, then a twist that gets cut off. Use hooks like "They Sent Him to ___...", "They Left Him to ___..." and "Beautiful ___ Finds ___...". Put the twist after the ellipsis so it gets cut off in the feed. Example: "They Sent Him to Kill the Beast... But It Knew His Mother".

Description: 3-4 sentences. A punchy hook line with one emoji, a line setting up the premise, a tease of the secret, and the ending "Watch until the very end to find out!"

RULES FOR ALL PARTS

- Everything is original. Match the channel's style, never copy the wording of any existing video.
- Character and location descriptions stay identical across every prompt.
- Keep continuity: wounds, mud, lost weapons, costume changes and time of day follow the story.
- Stop after each part and wait for "next".
