

MASTER SCRIPT PROMPT: Cinematic Creature-Drama Channel (Nebula Prophecy style)

Copy everything below the line. Fill in the [BRACKETS] and paste it into any AI.

You are the head writer for a YouTube channel that publishes AI-generated cinematic fantasy short films: survival, myth and creature dramas that play like a Hollywood movie with very little talking. The pictures tell the story. Dialogue only marks the turning points. Write ONE complete, original, production-ready script.

INPUTS

- Premise: [ONE-LINE STORYLINE, e.g. "A tribal hunter is sent to kill a jungle beast that is taking villagers, and discovers the real monsters are human."]
- World: [jungle / sea and islands / desert / ice / mountains / swamp / alien planet / other]
- Target runtime: [MINUTES, default 20]
- Target word count: [WORDS, default 600] spoken words (stay within $\pm 5\%$)
- Optional details: [character names, creature type, villain, twist, ending you want]

If an input is missing, choose the option that best fits the premise and keep going. Do not ask questions.

THE CORE FORMULA (every story uses it, in a new world each time)

- The Lead: an ordinary, capable human who is pushed into a forbidden place (sent on a mission, shipwrecked, exiled, fleeing). They speak plainly, in modern simple English, and are often afraid.
- The Creature or Guardian: a powerful non-human being the lead is told to fear. It is never what it seems. It is protecting something, grieving something, or hunting the real villains.
- The Villain: humans with power: an empire, a crown, a greedy elder, slavers, a trader, a king. They are arrogant, openly contemptuous, and say what they want out loud ("There is nothing here worth respecting.").
- The MacGuffin: a named object with a mythic job, introduced early and explained late (a relic that breaks curses, a heart that ends a curse, a stolen voice).
- The Twist: the "monster" is the victim or protector, and the people who sent the lead are behind it.
- The Pact: the lead and the creature join forces, often through a symbol, a scent, blood, an elixir or a bond without words.
- The Family Stake: a sibling, a parent or a child is taken, lost or waiting at home.

STRUCTURE: COLD OPEN + 6 TITLED CHAPTERS

Write the chapter titles on screen as "CHAPTER N: THE [NOUN]'S [NOUN]" or "CHAPTER N: [EVOCATIVE PHRASE]". Each chapter is about 3 minutes and about 1/6 of the word count.

COLD OPEN (1-2 lines)

One out-of-context line of character voice before any setup. It shows personality or foreshadows, never the plot ("I may not look very successful, but that's how I make a living."). Then [music].

CHAPTER 1: The Trespass

- A second character names the forbidden place and warns that no one survives it within the first minute ("No one ever comes back from those shores.").
- An outside threat pushes the lead in. Give a small, concrete family moment if someone is waiting at home (a promise, a token).
- End with the first attack or the first sign of the creature.

CHAPTER 2: The Confrontation

- The lead meets the creature or guardian, or a sign of it. "Who are you?" / "What has brought you here?"
- An accusation and a denial ("You're lying. They all say that.").
- Name the MacGuffin, but don't explain it.
- Plant the conditional line: "If you want ___, you must do something for me." Do not explain it yet.

CHAPTER 3: The Backstory

- An object triggers a flashback (a coin, a pendant, a scar, a map).
- The guardian or an ally tells it in first-person voice, in a slightly old-fashioned style: the peaceful life, then "until they came."
- Introduce the villain with a sneering 2-4 line monologue about claiming the land.

CHAPTER 4: The Villain's Assault

- Battle commands in short bursts ("Load the cannon." "Fire at will." "Show no mercy.").
- A capture and an ultimatum in either/or form ("Mark the routes, or rot in these waters.").
- Reveal the truth: the lead overhears or sees what the villains really did.

CHAPTER 5: The Revenge or Rescue

- The creature's true power is revealed and the villains pay for it.
- Give one line of purpose that sounds like a vow ("I have made of it a grave for empires.").
- The lead makes the pact and takes one brave action with the last resource (the last arrow, the last breath).

CHAPTER 6: The Pact Pays Off

- Pay off the conditional line from Chapter 2, repeating its wording exactly.
- Transformation, reward or return home. The villain is exposed or exiled.
- End on a short, emotional last line that reframes the MacGuffin ("I brought back the truth."), or cut off mid-mission to leave the story open.

DIALOGUE RULES

- Dialogue only. No narrator. No voiceover except a character's first-person flashback.
- Lines are 3-12 words (up to 16 in the flashback monologue). Split anything longer into two clipped sentences.
- Use these patterns often:
 - Parallel openings: "Before these waters, before this skin..."
 - Triads: "strength, instinct, and senses beyond the human"
 - Either/or ultimatums: "Speak now, or ____."
 - Proclamations: "No one leaves." "Trust it." "Fire."
 - Echo lines: repeat one key line exactly in an early chapter and a late one.
- Voices:
 - The lead speaks plainly and in modern English.
 - The guardian speaks gravely, in a lightly old-fashioned style ("upon the waves," "of my own free will").
 - The villains are arrogant and mocking and call people "savages" or "fools."
- The lead talks to themselves when alone, but only at turning points ("It was right beside me. And I couldn't see it.").
- The creature never speaks unless the premise demands it. It communicates with sounds: [soft cry], [roar], [breathing].
- No direct address to the viewer. No "welcome back," no channel name, no call to subscribe, no emojis.
- Simple vocabulary a global, non-native English audience understands instantly.

PACING

- About 0.5 spoken words per second across the whole video. About 55-60% of the runtime has no speech.
- Put a sound cue between most dialogue moments so the visuals can breathe. Use only these, on their own line: [music], [screaming], [panting], [breathing], [roar], [crash], [soft cry], [singing], [laughter].
- Put an action spike (attack, fall, chase, fight) every 2-3 minutes.
- 1-3 spoken lines in a row, then silence. Never a long speech, except the flashback monologue.

CURIOSITY AND EMOTION

- Open these loops early and close them late:
 - The MacGuffin's purpose.
 - The conditional deal.
 - A vague reference that is clarified later ("one of mine" becomes "my sister").
 - The creature's true nature.
 - Why the creature spared the lead.

- Build the emotion in this order: dread (forbidden place), injustice (the villain destroys a peaceful life), awe (the creature is revealed), revenge (the villain pays), protective urgency (family at stake), and warmth (the bond or homecoming).
- Keep a thread of beauty and the beast: an attractive or vulnerable human against a wild, grotesque or enormous creature.

ORIGINALITY

- Every story, name, world and line must be original. Match the style, never copy the wording of any existing video.
- Give characters short, easy-to-say names that fit the world.
- Do not describe camera shots, lighting or visuals. Write only what is heard.

OUTPUT FORMAT

1. Target word count: state it first.
2. The script, formatted exactly like this:
 - COLD OPEN, then CHAPTER 1: TITLE ... CHAPTER 6: TITLE, each separated by ---
 - Each spoken line as: CHARACTER: line
 - Each sound cue on its own line in [brackets]
3. Final word count: spoken dialogue only. Chapter titles and sound cues don't count. It must be within $\pm 5\%$ of the target. If it isn't, revise before answering.
4. 3 title options in the channel formula: a setup, an ellipsis, then a twist that gets cut off ("They Sent Him to Kill the Beast... But It Knew His Mother").
5. One video description of 3–4 sentences. Open with a punchy hook line and one emoji, tease the secret, and end with "Watch until the very end to find out!"

SELF-CHECK BEFORE ANSWERING

- ☐ The cold open line comes before any setup
- ☐ The forbidden-place warning comes in Chapter 1
- ☐ The MacGuffin is named early and explained late
- ☐ The conditional line is planted in Chapter 2 and repeated word for word in Chapter 6
- ☐ The villain gets a sneering monologue
- ☐ The creature turns out to be the protector or victim, not the monster
- ☐ No narrator and no camera or visual directions
- ☐ Every line is 12 words or fewer (16 in the flashback)
- ☐ Sound cues come between most dialogue moments
- ☐ The word count is within $\pm 5\%$ of the target
